Minimum RAM: 2 GB or more. Minimum (uncompressed) image size: 25 MB. Recommended: at least one GB of RAM, or a minimum of 4 GB of RAM if you plan to install many applications in parallel. • *Files:* Minimum 5 GB free space on the destination SSD. Recommended: at least 10 GB free space. If you intend to install several large files, such as video or large image files, we recommend to use an external hard drive to place the files. • *Downloads:* Minimum 2 MB download speed. Recommended: at least 10 MB/s download speed. • *Runtime:* Minimum (total) runtime time of about 2 GB. Recommended: at least 4 GB runtime. We recommend to use an external hard drive to store the runtime data. If you have to install the runtime data in a SSD, it will reduce the SSD's lifespan. In this configuration, the runtime data is placed on an external hard drive. Therefore, we recommend you to place the external hard drive (~500--600 GB) next to your PC or laptop. 3.5. Transfer of the Runtime Data to the Workstation {#sec3dot5-sensors-18-01837} ----- After the runtime has finished, the runtime data is transferred to the workstation (please also note that the transfer of the runtime data is dependent on the network connection). Before starting the runtime, we recommend you to check if the image has already been copied to the workstation. Otherwise, we recommend you to wait for the runtime to complete. 4. Benchmark Configuration

{#sec4-sensors-18-01837} ===== The speed and availability of an image processing system are mainly determined by the performance of the used workstation. Therefore, we recommend to use a modern workstation. For this reason, we recommend to use a workstation with a processor of at least two cores. We recommend to use a workstation with at least four GB of RAM. However, the workstation should not be too powerful because of the increased power consumption.

An 8 GB RAM should be enough for a "regular" workstation. In addition, we recommend to use a workstation with an SSD (solid-state drive), in order to have a working system in a quick time. We recommend to use a workstation with an SSD, because a fast work 82157476af
